Avoid Pet Shops, Online Ads and Puppy Mills Sadly, not all breeders use safe and healthy breeding practices, and that puts the animals in their care at risk for having health problems that could be deadly or lead to thousands of dollars in vet care. Reputable breeders don't advertise on the site. Here's what you need to know when buying a pet from a breeder. Check the Breeder's References The most important first step is to find a breeder with an excellent reputation. If you're looking for a specific breed of animal or an animal with a known background, you may want to work with a breeder. Visit the babies as often as you can until your pet is old enough to take home, and be sure to take your children so they can get to know their new pet too. This gives you an opportunity to check out conditions to make sure you aren't buying from someone who mistreats animals or keeps them in unhealthy or unsafe environments. Similarly, if a breeder wants to meet you in a grocery store parking lot, the animal is likely from a puppy mill or equally horrendous place. Beware of breeders who advertise online and promise to ship you a puppy without ever meeting you. Does the breed have a history of medical problems? Finally, when you find a breeder who interests you, ask for two references from people who have purchased animals from them in the last year. Puppies and kittens grow up and typically live anywhere from 10 to 20 years, and that adds up to a lot of time together. Smucker for $1.7B on Apr 4, 2018.
